Chelmsford, Massachusetts/ July 4, 2016 - Amber Wolf, a novel by Ursula Wong, is released by Genretarium Publishing.

Rich with scenes of Lithuania, Amber Wolf tells the little-known tale of a people struggling for their freedom against great odds. After substantial research and using new source material, Ursula Wong has distilled the turmoil of 1944 into the saga of a family torn apart by the Soviet occupation.

Synopsis: When brutal Russian soldiers invade 1944 Lithuania, they ravage the countryside and the people. Young Ludmelia Kudirka, whose mother has been murdered, flees to the safety of the forest. Vowing vengeance, she joins the partisans who trade pitchforks for guns to fight the mighty Soviet war machine in a David-and-Goliath struggle.

Additional information is available in Ursula Wong's interview in the Lowell Sun.

Known for her portrayal of strong women, Ursula Wong is also the author of the Purple Trees, second-place winner in the 2015 E-Festival of Words Best Fiction Category. A retired computer engineer, Ursula's stories have been published in the anthologies Insanity Tales and Insanity Tales II: The Sense of Fear. Amber Wolf is her second novel.

Amber Wolf is available on Amazon, Barnes and Noble, Kobo, and the iBookstore.
